IFor the Dispatch.) A Picture of Bliss.

Tis a lovely summer's eve; The earth is calm, screne; The sun, retreating from the sky, Still smiles upon the scene; And, as his crimson rays
Fall softly from above.
They fall upon one spot at least
Whose atmosphere is love.

In this sweet, rustic spot, Far from the world of care, Lest in th' enchanting dream of love. Behold a happy pair.

Their hopes, their joys are one; Their souls together bound; For each within the other's heart A resting-place has found.

Beside them runs a brook.

Whose wavelets, bright and clear,
Lauresoftly at the words of love
He pours into her car.

Before them waves a field Of bright and golden grain. Whose soft and silken leaves repeat The happy tate again.

Above them towers an oak, whose foliage green and boughs Whisper tegether of their sweet And offerenseted your And off-repeated vows.

And gentle acphyr's breath.

Laden with perfume sweet.

Floats softly round the placid scene
Where love and beauty meet.

King Cupid's amorous hosts Fly 'round on noiseless wing; And gentle favs. from fairy-land, Theirtiny offerings bring.

The scene indeed is one Replete with touching grace; For Nature's leveliest works are here. To beautify the place.

J. L. H. A STRENGE STORY .- A most remarkable story comes to us from the adjoining county of Middlessex. A resident of that county, whether asleep or awake, drunk or sober, we are not informed, was told by a ghostly visitor to go and dig at a certain point, minutely described, where he would find first two cedar posts and afterwards come to a box nine feet square, which contained two millions of dollars in hard currency. The party to whom these wonderful revelations had been so supernaturally imparted, induced by curiosity, a desire to test the accuracy of the information which he had received, and a wish to resume specie payment as far as he was concerned, whether General Grant's veto message lead to general resumption or whether it didn't, being with him a matter of perfect indifference, repaired to the locality designated, which he found to have been so accurately described that he had no difficulty in discovering the precise spot. Going diligently to work with pick and spade soon reached the cedar posts, which this generous apparition had described as being above the muchdesired treasure. Stimulated to redoubled efforts by this corroboration of the tale, he works so diligently that soon he feels the top of the box beneath his spade, and almost hears the clink of the Spanish dollars that Captain Kidd or some other bold buccaneer had there deposited. Work! Work! Work! Spadeful after spadeful of earth is thrown up; hour after hour glides by; the sun sets behind the western hills, and the dim twilight deepens into night, but the fortune-finder of millions still plies his busy spade, and still touches at every blow the much coveted box. Night lifts her sable curtain, and blushing Aurora ushers in the refulgent god of day, but still the dull thud of the spade, as it is driven into the earth, breaks on the stillness of the crisp morning air. Pausing an instant to wipe from his reeking brow I am now prepared to offer extraordinary induce-the perspiration that had gathered there duments in this line. ring his lonely and continuous labors, he

At last accounts he was still engaged in digging this new tunnel, and at any moment we may expect to hear the explosion of the powder keg which announces the successful issue of this brilliantly-conceived plan to circumvent the devil and obtain an abundant supply of the "root of all evil."- Tap-

THE RICHMOND THEATRE FOR

SALE AT AUCTION.—By request of the owner, who wishes to retire from business, we will sell, upon the premises, by public auction, on MONDAY, 11th of May, at 5 o'clock P. M., that most valuable property known throughout the country as THE RICHMOND THEATRE, situated at the southeast corner of Broad and Seventh streets.

It is most substantially built of brick and stucced; fronts 60 feet on Broad street; runs back 130 feet to a wide alley, and in its finish, appointments, and arrangements for first-class theatrical and operatic exhibitions will compare most favorable with any similar establishment in the South. It contains a fine stage, a handsome dress-circle and orchestra, parquotte, family-circle, and gallery, and eight private boxes, affording seats for 1.400 persons or more; also, about twenty retiringrooms, fine saloon, family apartments (up-stairs) with six rooms, and two small stores or offices on Broad street.

It is, besides, well stocked with scenery, drop-curtains, and stage machinery, and stands to-my the best-appointed piece of property of the kind south of Washington.

By a beautiful and not expensive plan two large in the hands of an active, enterprising person or association this could be made with little effort and attention, merely as real estate, by its revenues in the way of actual rents from theatre, stores, and saloons (to say nothing of what might be done, in addition, by a person in the profession) one of the most productive pieces of property in the city.

Numerous engagements for the future are new booked, with frequent applications for more.

Richmond is one of the main points between the North and the South, and no good company or troupe omits often an engagement of this Theatre.
